

R/C Speaker Series

Transfer Roundtable

Thursday February 11th at 3:30pm
Common Room (WMS 013)

The research that graduate students engage in can lead to new lines of research, new questions, and new collaborations. In this roundtable, three alumni of the R/C program, and one current student, highlight their roles and participation in the Teaching for Transfer (TFT) research project(s); the research began as two related dissertations and was shared initially in conference presentations, then later in journal articles, book chapters, and a book. Currently, that research is widening to include 9-sites, all studying the role of TFT in supporting students' transfer of writing knowledge and practice, although in some different ways given various student populations, courses, academic calendars, and so on. The group assembled for this roundtable will consider the research itself as well as what we've learned about researching and collaborating over time.

---

Dr. Matt Davis graduated from FSU in 2012 and is an Assistant Professor of English at the University of Massachusetts, Boston. Dr. Liane Robertson, who graduated from FSU in 2011, is an Assistant Professor of English at William Paterson University. Dr. Kara Taczak, who also graduated in 2011, is a Teaching Assistant Professor of Writing at the University of Denver. Erin Workman is a PhD candidate at FSU.